USING NURSING RESEARCH TO ADDRESS MATERNAL HEALTH EQUITY IN THE COMMUNITY

TUESDAY, APRIL 30

12-1 PM

CLAUDE MOORE
MEDICAL EDUCATION
BUILDING, ROOM 3110

LUCINDA CANTY, PhD, RN, CNM, FACNM, FAAN

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR & DIRECTOR OF SEEDWORKS
HEALTH EQUITY IN NURSING PROGRAM,
ELAINE MARIEB COLLEGE OF NURSING,
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

A certified nurse midwife, associate professor, and Seedworks Health Equity in Nursing Program director at UMass Amherst, Canty uses her lived experience as a Black woman as well as her poetry; art, and racial disparities research to offer a reproductive justice lens to improve racial disparities in maternal health. Founder of Lucinda's House, a Black maternal health collective, she promotes health equity through community collaboration and educational and support programs.

Desired outcomes for this session

Upon completion of this earning activity, participants should be able to:

- Describe methodologies used to understand the historical context and current issues influencing disparities in maternal health outcomes.
- Discuss how research informs health policy and advocacy.
- Discuss how research assists with developing maternal health initiatives on the community level.
- Identify methods to engage students in community-based participatory research and community-engaged initiatives.

Provided by the University of Virginia School of Medicine and School of Nursing.

Clinical Updates from the Experts Series Description:

Through participation in the Clinical Updates series, clinicians will increase knowledge of available research evidence to optimize patient outcomes, describe strategies for translating current evidence to practice settings, and identify gaps in the current clinical knowledge base that, through new research, could be addressed to improve population health.
