

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This volume could not have been compiled without the essential assistance of the local mental health providers and the State mental health agencies that contributed data on program operations. Compilation of these data was greatly facilitated by the National Association of State Mental Health Program Directors, the American Hospital Association, the National Association of Psychiatric Healthcare Systems, and the National Center on Health Statistics. In addition, the managed behavioral healthcare industry and the health maintenance organization industry provided important information.

Special thanks are due to each person who participated in the focus groups described in the first chapter, especially primary consumers and family members; each member of the technical groups that prepared materials on prevalence of serious emotional disturbance in children and adolescents and serious mental illness in adults; and each of the professional organizations that provided information on human resources in the mental health field.

Particular recognition is due to Jane K. Myers for her editorial support. All other support and assistance are gratefully acknowledged.

Disclaimer

The chapters presented in this volume reflect the views and opinions of the authors. They do not necessarily reflect the official position or policy of the Center for Mental Health Services, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, or the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Suggestion Citation

Center for Mental Health Services. Mental Health, United States, 1998. Manderscheid, R.W., and Henderson, M.J., eds. DHHS Pub. No. (SMA)99-3285. Washington, DC: Supt. of Docs., U.S. Govt. Print. Off., 1998.

DHHS Publication No. (SMA)99-3285

Printed 1998